esolutions of Respect to Generals Lee and Long-The Question of Meeting in Other Cities Discussed.

The annual reunion of the Virginia Division of the Association of the Army of Northern Virginia was held last night in the hall of the House of Delegates. Among the distinguished ex-Confederates present were : Generals Jubal A. Early, William B. Taliaferro, Thomas L. Rosser, J. C. Hill, James G. Fields, Kinney, Mayor Ellyson, Hon. J. L. M. at 12 M. to-day:

Kinney, Mayor Ellyson, Hon. J. L. M. at 12 M. to-day:

Assistant Marshals—Joseph Bryan, D. James R. Werth, W. J. and Dabney H. Maury, Governor Mc-Ruffin, E. P. Reeve, J. B. Purcell, Snowden R. Andrews, Majors Brauder, Lacy, and others.

In calling the meeting to order the president, General William H. Payne, Philip Haxall, Dr. Spiers George, Captaid he was afraid it was his fault that tain M. J. Dimmock, Meade F. White, for the first time in the history of the association there was no regular orator. He commented upon the fact that interest in the association appeared to be upon the wane, and expressed the hope that some steps would be taken to bring about a renewal of interest in it.

RESPECT TO GENERAL LEE. Hon, George L. Christian offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee to prepare suitable resolu-tions upon the death of General W. H. F. Lee, an ex-president of the society

This was done and the Chair nam Hon. George L. Christian, Generals W. B. Taliaferro and Dabney H. Mauray. The committee performed its duty, and in a short while through Judge Christain reported a beautiful tribute to the illustrious dead.

In presenting the resolutions Judge Christian made a brief but feeling speech.
General Jubal A. Early took the floor and in less than a score of words seconded the resolutions. General W. B. Talinferro said he had not known General Lee during the war, being in another branch of the service. It was after the cessation of hostilities that he met and learned to love the He was not simply the son of his father, but was per se great. It was in private life that he knew him and learn-ed to esteem his character.

IN MEMORY OF LONG.

Major Woods next moved the appointment of a committee to draft resolutions upon the death of General A. L. Long. Before taking his sent the speaker said it was time that organization for the purpose of talking only was done away with, and that some business was transacted. Old Confederates needed atten tion and care, and if the Legislature understood matters a larger appropriation for them would be forthcoming.

The Chair declared the motion carried without putting the vote, and appointed Governor Mckinney, General Rosser, and Colone Purcell the committee.

After the lapse of some minutes the Chair suggested to the Governor that his committee retire. His Excellency said it took time to draft resolutions and remained in the room, saying his committee would report later. SPEECH OF A PRIVATE.

General Rosser, referring to the remark of the Chair in opening the exer-cises, suggested that the association could possibly revive itself by meeting around in the different cities instead of always coming to Richmond.

In supporting General Rosser's reso-lution Mr. McMillan, of Madison, made the speech of the evening. He was, he simply a private in the rear rank, a soldier of Kemper's brigade, Pickett's division, an honor that he would not exchange for the title of any general It was the private soldiers who helped the generals out. It reminded him of the old times when he came to the hall early and saw the old feds come in, first the privates and the generals behind, just like they used to Mr. McMillan concluded in this strain and was loudly applauded.

SHOULD MEET HERE,

Major J. Horace Lacy, of Spotsylvania, said he was sorry to oppose his friend who had preceded him, but the hall where they were was the proper meeting-place of the Army of Northern Virginia, which would live forever. The Major spoke at some length and was quite plain in his talk about "bombproofs," and other like subjects.

There is no money or politics in the Association of the Army of Northern Virginia. He was glad that there is one place where money was not to be made. He favored all Confederate camps uniting with the Army of Northern Virginia in forming one grand association. Hon, George L. Christian reminded those present that the association had in the past held glorious meetings in Richmond, where was sown the seed from which the other organizations have sprung. More people would attend the meetings in Richmond than elsewhere. The subordinate organizations had done splendid practical work, but they could not take the place of the Army of Northern Virginia. To test the sense of the meeting he moved that the organization of the society be perpetuated, and to that end that the present officers be continued for the ensuing year. HOW ABOUT MONTICELLO ?

General Field favored General Ros ser's resolution, and thought that Charlottesville in sight of Monticello was a splendid place for meeting, but still he was not sure it was wise to change.

Referring to the World's Fair, General Field said he would never disgrace himself by going to a place where the Confederate flag is not allowed. It was strange that the northern people are nearly frightened out of their wits at the mention of Confederate flags.

Virginians, he said, should teach their children to worship at the shrines of Lee, Jackson, Hill, and Stuart.

There is no loss of interest in the association, and never would be as long as the deeds of southern soldiers lived. He never knew a Confederate soldier to say he was sorry that he was one or that he was ashamed of it. His wife was a was ashamed of it. His wife was a girl when the war was going on, but she thought more of his old uniform than all the money in the country. When women remember there is no danger of forgetting.

AFFECTED BY THE FAIR.

General Early thought the small attendance was due to the fact that since the Exposition no regular fair had been held, and no meeting of the association. In future with regular fairs the attendance would be up to the old standard. Richmond, he said, is undoubtedly the proper place for the association to assem-ble, and he suggested that Judge Christian divide his resolution.

General Rosser, speaking in support

General Rosser, speaking at of his resolution, said he did not propose of his resolution, and he association. The survivors of the Army of Northern Virginia could not afford to come to Richmond, and the only thing for the asso ciation to do was to meet at different points where the soldiers could attend.

Judge Christian's substitute, that the association meet in Richmond at such time as the Executive Committee may determine, and continuing the old of-ficers, was adopted.

APPEAL FOR THE MONUMENT.
